Volume 38

Autumn 2015

Vagn says...

For those of you who were not able to make the VW Nationals, you missed an incredible show. Well over 300 vehicles were entered in the show and shine. All years and models were well represented. With row after row of Bay window Kombis, this was probably the most difficult category for the judges.

The one thing I enjoyed the most was catching up with customers both old and new, especially those that live out of Auckland. I know all of us at Qualitat get a sense of pride when we see vehicles and owners at events like the Nationals with vehicles that are maintained by us and are running our parts.

Winter is arriving rapidly. This is a good time to be checking batteries. A tired battery will always fail with the onset of cold, damp weather. This is also a good time assess wiper blade condition. We are now carrying a fantastic Aero blade replacement for late model Volkswagen, Audi and Skodas.

Car maker claims to have invented 'fuel of the future'

Audi has created diesel from just air and water!

A team of researchers working for Audi in Germany has managed to make diesel fuel using just water and carbon dioxide.

The process, masterminded by deantech firm Sunfire, is pretty simple. First, renewable energy is used to split water molecules into oxygen and pure hydrogen, while carbon dioxide is gathered from a biogas plant. Then, the two are mixed together under very hot and high-pressure conditions. The result is a liquid which the company has named 'blue crude'. That can then be refined into biodiesel.

The efficiency of the method is pretty high - about 70%, and the synthetic fuel is free of contaminants that occur in regular diesel. Audi says that it's suitable for either mixing with regular diesel or even to be used as a fuel in its own right.

The production plant, which is located in Dresden, is set to produce about 160 litres of the synthetic diesel every day over the coming months, with the possibility of expansion.

"If we get the first sales order, we will be ready to commercialise our technology", said Sunfire's CTO Christian von Olshausen.

Germany's Federal Minister of Education and Research, Johanna Wanka, added: "This synthetic diesel, made using CO₂, is a huge success for our sustainability research. If we can make widespread use of CO₂ as a raw material, we will make a crucial contribution to climate protection and the efficient use of resources, and put the fundamentals of the "green economy" in place."

VW News ...

The VW Type 2 Van might come back as a battery-electric vehicle!

Those who have spent many hazy days travelling on a hippie trail in a fried-out Kombi may be intrigued to hear that the iconic Volkswagen Type 2 camper might make a very modern return as an electric vehicle.

Speaking at the New York Auto Show to Autocar, VW board member Dr Heinz-Jakob Neusser said that the company is developing a camper van concept that will sport an electric motor driving the front wheels. Battery packs will be laid out under the floor, allowing for maximum cargo space.

As fond as we remember the way-back (and far out) days of the Type 2, it only just went out of production two years ago. Brazil had the last operation factory and produced the car until 2013 when transport safety regulations made it obsolete.
